

Choosing a feeder...

Optimal capacity is dependent on:

- Number and size of birds.
- How often you prefer to refill the feeders.

Pick a feeder that will provide enough feed for the birds between your visits to the coop.

For waterfowl use a feeder with a wide base so they can fit their bills into it.

If you have a few birds or visit frequently, you can manage with a smaller feeder.

As bird size and/or flock size increases, so should the size of the feeder.

What is a bird's daily feed intake?

A medium-size adult chicken will eat about 4 oz (1/4 lb) of feed per day. This varies by age and size of bird and the type of feed.

To keep litter out of feed...

Chicks

Use a Chick Stand (below).

Adults

1. Use grills or guards in feeders.
2. Keep feeders several inches above the ground by hanging them or placing on cinder blocks or other sturdy support.

Feed flow...

Feed flow is affected by the fineness of feed, humidity and amount of feed. Very fine feeds, moist air or compacted feed will cause the feed to flow poorly through feeders.

Solution—with large feeders select a coarser feed that does not “bind-up” as easily.
