Getting hens to lay in a nest box

The nesting area must be...

- A place where the hens want to lay their eggs.
- Accessible to egg collectors.
- Easy to clean.

Otherwise hens will lay on the floor, where the eggs are likely to be soiled, cracked and hard to reach.

Occasionally, hens hide their eggs and nests. Finding eggs a week or two after they have been laid can be a less than pleasant experience.

When to use nest eggs?

- To persuade hens to lay eggs in a nesting box (and not elsewhere).
- To discourage egg eating by hens, a bad habit that can spread rapidly and is hard to stop.

(left) Placing a nest egg (below) to encourage the hens to lay in the correct area. Shown here is a ChickBox.

Nest Box FAQs

Q. What if the hens don't lay in the nesting box?

- A. Consider these changes:
 - Try placing a ceramic or wooden nest egg in the box (below right).
 - Place a comfortable amount of clean bedding in the nesting box. Remove after they consistently lay in the box.
 - Locate nests in darker, secluded areas. Hens prefer to nest where they feel less visible to predators.

Q. Where and how high should I set up the nest boxes?

A. Place in corners or dimly lit areas of the coop, but make sure both you and your birds have easy access to the nest. 2 ft high at the base of the nest is reachable for most birds. Egg-stealing pests also have a harder time reaching this height.

Q. What material should I use?

A. We've sold or used plastic, metal and wooden boxes over the years, with hundreds of chickens. Plastic is preferred because it doesn't rot, is easy to clean, and lacks seams that mites or lice can hide in.

Hybrid metal/plastic units are a close second, combining metal's durability and plastic's quick cleaning.

Q. Should I use bedding?

A. With a roll-out tray, you may have to initially use bedding. After the hens get in the habit of laying in the box (with a tray), gradually remove the bedding.

If not using the roll-out tray, we prefer straw or hay—both stay in the box better than wood shavings.

Wooden	Brown Ceramic White Ceramic
Discou	Nest Eggs trage egg eating and teach ere to lay their eggs.
Mark t	he ceramic eggs in order to
Mark t tell then	,
Mark t tell then	he ceramic eggs in order to apart from the real eggs in
Mark t tell them the nest. Wooden	he ceramic eggs in order to apart from the real eggs in
Mark t tell them the nest. Wooden	he ceramic eggs in order to a part from the real eggs in (We've made this mistake!)
Mark t tell them the nest. Wooden Chicken Eg Ceramic Chicken Eg	the ceramic eggs in order to a part from the real eggs in (We've made this mistake!) gg#530137 gg. brown#530136
Mark ti tell them the nest. Wooden Chicken Eg Chicken Eg Chicken Eg	the ceramic eggs in order to a part from the real eggs in (We've made this mistake!) gg
Mark t tell them the nest. Wooden Chicken Eg Chicken Eg Chicken Eg Quail Egg,	the ceramic eggs in order to a part from the real eggs in (We've made this mistake!) gg#530137 gg. brown#530136